Promoting Diversity in Health-Related Research

The Center for Demography of Health and Aging (CDHA) at the University of Wisconsin-Madison invites PhD candidates to propose collaborations to submit Research Supplements to Promote Diversity in Health-Related Research to NIH to extend grants by our faculty affiliates and extend the reach of CDHA themes.

Eligibility: researchers from (1) underrepresented racial/ethnic groups or (2) with disabilities or (3) from disadvantaged backgrounds (Details here: <https://grants.nih.gov/grants/guide/pa-files/PA-20-166.html>).

Many of our affiliates are eligible to submit supplements tied to specific research grants, as is the CDHA center. We provide some examples here in case you see a match between your expertise/interests and specific projects:

Jason Fletcher: The Importance of Place in Determining Health and Mortality at Older Ages

Kristen Malecki: Researching Epigenetics, Weathering, Aging & Residential Disadvantage

Jason Fletcher: The Importance of Place of Birth in Determining Old Age Cognitive Health

Lauren Schmitz: Life Course Determinants of Epigenetic Age Acceleration and Subsequent Dementia

CDHA provides a research and training environment that is strong in collegiality, computing, geographic information analysis, and administrative services. Faculty affiliates of the center come from a number of departments including Sociology, Economics, Community and Environmental Sociology, Social Work, Population Health Sciences, Public Affairs, Statistics, and Human Development and Family Studies. General support for the Center is provided by core funding from the National Institute of Aging. For more information about the Center's research faculty and current research activities, please visit our website at <https://cdha.wisc.edu>.

To apply, please send curriculum vitae, a short description of research and a potential match with a project or the Center, names for three letters of recommendation, and copies of publications to: Jason Fletcher, Director, Center for Demography of Health and Aging, University of Wisconsin-Madison: jason.fletcher@wisc.edu and Sherry Huhn shuhn@wisc.edu. Inquiries will be considered on a rolling basis.
